

Where Are You Judy

Andy Shauf

Gentle mess, water falling from two eyes.
You looked at me, said it would be alright.
City lights dazzled you away from me.
I think we both knew that's how that would be.

But now Charlie's in my left ear, blowing my mind again
As he's saying, "Did you know Judy's back in town?"
"I guess I didn't hear about that.
How long has she been here?
I haven't seen her around."

I only miss her when the skies are above.
Oh, where are you, Judy?
Where are you, Judy?

A telephone rings and I wish it were mine
With your voice on the other line,
Telling me that you were sick of everything.
Like we could pick it all up again.

Now I'm in my left ear telling you lies again.
Do I pretend that I know all the shit I did,
And I know how I could fix it?
I wish we could start again,
I think you would understand.

I only miss you when the skies are above,
Oh, where are you, Judy?
Where are you, Judy?

If you were in my left ear talking so sweet again,
If you were in my left ear talking so sweet again,
I would ask you, "Where are you, Judy?"
"Where are you, Judy?"
"Oh, where are you, Judy?"
"Where are you, Judy?"

Where are you, Judy?
Where are you, Judy?
