

This Bouquet

Ani DiFranco

Got a garden of songs where I grow all my thoughts wish I could harvest one or two for some small talk Seems like I'm starving for words whenever you're around nothing on my tongue so much in the ground
nothing on my tongue so much in the ground

Half the time I got my gaze trained on your motel door fourth door from the end rest of the time my gaze lays like a stain on the carpeted floor if it weren't for my brain I'd just go over and make friends too bad about my brain 'cause I'd like to make friends.

See the little song bird unable to make a sound even though she follows her words from town to town we both have gardens of songs and maybe its okay that I am speechless 'cause I picked you this bouquet.
