Cat's Claw

April Wine

She huh, living in a cat's claw mind Hoping you like what you find But you'd better take it real slow So many things you don't know Sweeter than the sweet that comes to the brain Just upon the threshold of pain That's the hold you have over me Woman won't you please set me free

You took me places higher than I ever wanted to go You took me places higher than any man should ever hope to go

Strange love, torn between the heart and the soul Laughing while the body grows cold Somewhere that I should never be Woman won't you please let me be Free me, from the darkness here underground Screaming but I can't hear a sound Drowning in the pleasures of pain I can't see the sky, for the rain

You took me places higher than I ever wanted to go You took me places higher than any man should ever hope to go, oh no

Reaching for the sun to come and take me home Sitting in a chair and sinking like a stone

Sweeter than the sweet that comes to the brain Just upon the threshold of pain That's the hold you have over me Woman won't you please set me free

You took me places higher than I ever wanted to go You took me places higher than any man should ever hope to go, oh no