

The Crown

Axe

I hear you calling with a challenge that I can't ignore
And I'm recalling that we've said all you're saying before
Though you're proclaiming you found something new
You're not the first or the last
Can't claim to discover what's stood there before
'Cause your future is somebody's past

Eternal stories last just a moment in time
There is no warning, it's gone in the blink of an eye
Though it is written in ages been said
A wise man should already know
There's a change of the tide, an end to the ride
But we have to find out on our own

A fading reflection
Out of our ashes reborn
Why can't you see the connection?
Is it so tattered and torn?
You're just claiming a crown
That so many have already worn

I hear you calling with a challenge that I can't ignore
And I'm recalling that we've said all you're saying before
Though you're proclaiming you found something new
You're not the first or the last
Can't claim to discover what's stood there before
'Cause your future is somebody's past

A fading reflection
Out of our ashes reborn
Why can't you see the connection?
Is it so tattered and torn?
You're just claiming a crown
That so many have already worn

A fading reflection
Out of our ashes reborn
Why can't you see the connection?
Is it so tattered and torn?
You're just claiming a crown
That so many have already worn
Claiming a crown
That so many have already worn