

Reflections

Bella Morte

Just a thought before I fall
Wondering chance or fate or something else
At night the air's a thousand pounds
Home is a song away, a story told

Something you said I can't recall
Words in the dead of night
So strong and small
Won't forget just who we were
Reflections of stars
So bright in seas so dark

Standing beneath the springtime rain
Wondering how and why we veered this way
Alright, I swear we'll be alright
Remember the laughter from our early days

Something you said I can't recall
Words in the dead of night
So strong and small
Won't forget just who we were
Reflections of stars
So bright in seas so dark

Rain, cold as our faith
Fall down into our lives, fall onto us
Rain, cold as our faith
Fall down into our lives
Night after night into day

Something you said I can't recall
Words in the dead of night
So strong and small
Won't forget just who we were
Reflections of stars
So bright in seas so dark
