

The Sophomore

Ben Rector

I don't have too much to say, except for the change in the weather.

Today is the same as yesterday; stuck in a sophomore effort.

There's so much I don't know.

Don't know why we fear the change when we've only just begun,
Because with fear comes hope the same, and tomorrow's gonna come.

There's so much I don't know,
There's so much I don't know.

And you find you're holding on to everything you know,
But the strength to move beyond is found in letting go.

There's so much I don't know,
There's so much I don't know.
There's so much I don't know,
There's so much I don't know.

It's like learning how to drive on a crowded highway.
Whether this dies or stays alive, I did it my way.
I know that the adventure's gone,
But it's the second time I find that what is lost is replaced by grace that I find.

There's so much I don't know,
There's so much I don't know.
There's so much I don't know,
There's so much I don't know.