

Silly Fool

Better Than Ezra

From the days when you were still in school pushed your finger tip til it turned blue and you doubted everything you learned second guessed the best that you can do well you're growing older and i think you would have learned all you're getting over don't you know it will return

you silly fool
you must be blind
oh you silly fool

well you call yourself a realist but its really just the fear that's holding you so you separate and alienate anyone who tries to pull you through and could you tell me something when you lie alone at night do you ever wonder if i feel the same inside

you silly fool
you must be blind
oh you silly fool

everyone can look for reasons while filling up the seasons you've got so much to give sometimes its hard to let you go and you're growing older and i think you might have learned everything you give in life when you know it will return

you silly fool

oh oh oh oh
