

Fire

Bipolar Sunshine

Standing there
Two people
No talking just
You stay on one side and I stay on the next
The TV flickers, and the remote control stays in the middle of us

And you run away
I know I should I call you
But I'm gonna wait
For you to cool out
And you run away
I know I should I call you
But I'm gonna wait
For you to cool out

Kill the tension in the air
Talk to you, whisper and move your hair
From where, you hear what I say and I hear what you say and...

And you run away
I know I should I call you
But I'm gonna wait
For you to cool out
And you run away
I know I should I call you
But I'm gonna wait
For you to cool out

Felt the tension in the air for a while now
Knife sits on the corner of my seat
Simple words conjure emotion
But not the one that inspire belief
Or maybe you'll be fine in the morning
Or maybe you'll change the locks
Friends come over, and we hide all the cracks behind the rocks
Drink don't help
And drugs don't work
Sat in a puddle of regret
Staring at a smashed plate
Can't remember the last date, where I didn't play the villain
Are we reaching the end of the sandglass
This can't be the end of the sandglass
Is that a smile I see?

And you run away
I know I should I call you
But I'm gonna wait
For you to cool out
And you run away
I know I should I call you
But I'm gonna wait
For you to cool out

I feel your fire eyes red like you've seen a ghost [x12]