Seen It All

Bombshell Rocks

He was one of the few true rebels, a small town bomber Drew his final tag and ran out of sight And he was no simple thief or dirty robber 21 years of age he kissed the world goodnight

He said I'm leaving
I've seen it all
Your name is written on the wall

2 o'clock in a weak condition Riding on his bike through the old neighborhood Accept the truth see the death of a vision Wondering about the things he never understood

Soul scars and homeward bound When all your dreams are falling dead to the ground Soul scars and grinding pain Old friend, memories remain
