My Oldest Memory

Bowerbirds

I cracked my knuckles, and I said grace
And gave thanks for being a hundred and still feeling amazed.
Out where the waves wrestle with the dirty brine,
This is a lonely place. This was a home of mine.
After the struggle, Id watch the sand settle
Over the quiet reef. Its my oldest memory.

And I dont know whose land were on. Is this an island that plots like a villain, Or an old ghost friend we dont believe in? I dont know.

I curse the weapon we stub our toes on. Its the land of make believe, cant you see, cant you see? Now in the dirt where I put my feet, and in the trunk of my bod y,

Im only shy, here, when I want to be, my head between my cypres s knees.

And in the top of the canopy of the trees I am climbing, The morning sun here, you will see. Its my oldest memory.

And I dont know whose land were on.
Is this an island that plots like a villain,
Or an old ghost friend we dont believe in?
Is this an island that plots like a villain,
Or an old ghost friend we dont believe in?
I dont know
