

Warren's Song, Pt. 22

Bracket

I tried to give you the end of my world
You wanted everything
I'm reinventing excuses disguised as my apology

This is just a tiny waste of life
All my memories will turn to lies

You occupy my regrets
The past will never forget
How can I be happy
When I'm still irritated

I have waited a lifetime
To hear your words of empathy
If I am a disease
I know that you are just a remedy

This is just a tiny waste of life
All my memories will turn to lies

You occupy my regrets
The past will never forget
How can I be happy
When I'm still irritated

How am I
How am I
How am I supposed to know
Who am I
Who am I
Who am I to let you go

This is just a tiny waste of life
All my memories will turn to lies

You occupy my regrets
The past will never forget
How can I be happy
When I'm still irritated