

Alone Together

Brendan James

I don't know the words that you speak
I don't know the thoughts that you keep
I don't know what y'all do on Sundays
I don't know the difference you make
I don't know the tears that you fake
I don't know what y'all do on Mondays

I could act like I never care
Like I never need anybody there
I could run to oblivion
Imagine I am the only one, but

I would be lost without you here
Begging the gods for you to reappear
Now that we're living more than ever
Alone together
Never have I been more aware
Happiness is only real when shared
Now that we're living more than ever
Alone together
Alone together
Alone together

I don't know the places you go
I don't know the faces you know
I don't know the people you lean on
I don't know the chances you lack
I don't know the weight on your back
I don't know what helps you to keep on

I could act like I never cared
Like I never need anybody there
I could run to oblivion
Imagine I am the only one, but

I would be lost without you here
Begging the gods for you to reappear
Now that we're living more than ever
Alone together
Never have I been more aware
Happiness is only real when shared
Now that we're living more than ever
Alone together

There's only love in my heart and I cannot deny it
It's running deep in my blood and I know where to find it
If you are down on your knees 'cause of how you've been treated
I would listen to you, I would pledge my allegiance

I would be lost without you here
Begging the gods for you to reappear
Now that we're living more than ever
Alone together
Alone together

Never have I been more aware
Happiness is only real when shared

Now that we're living more than ever
Alone together
