

Memories of Blood

Cryptopsy

I awake remembering nothing the next day,
my nostrils assailed
by the stench of decay Dreams of dismemberment, fantasies of torture Mopping up affords me a reminiscence of death;
Goosey bits and pieces are all that is left

Stench of rot: uplifting smell Someone's dead or at least unwell;
What little is left smells impure;
Who did this? I'm not sure

No conscience interferes with my memories of blood; PSI energy remains
where a human once stood;
I equate its suffering with the longevity of a ghost Who lasts the longest is who suffered the most
