

Go Home Alone

Dala

I'm watching the door, as I wait by the phone
I used to enjoy, the time on my own
But now that you're renting, that room in my head
I picture myself, and find you instead

And the words that I hear, are the ones left unsaid
You can wrap your arms 'round, but hold back in your head
And I dreamed you were here, but you're miles to the West
And I'm starting to fear, we won't pass this test

And I have seen, your shadow walk you home
And I know we'd survive, if we left each other alone,
'Cause when you go home, you go alone

And when the nights don't make up for the days
And the game becomes more war than play
To go home might be better than to stay

And I hope you can hear, the raid coming down
For the say the same sun lights up both our towns,
But I'm starting to think, looking through a glass pane,
That we'll never share the same days again

And I have seen, your shadow walk you home
And I know we'd survive, if we left each other alone,
'Cause when you go home, you go alone
