Ugliness consists of the scraps of beauty Evil from the pieces of good Life's just only thousands of deaths Happiness doesn't consist of anything

Through veins of the world hate does flow The maggots prey inside I take them in my hand one by one In search for beauty

Six cases I have with God Six ordeals to go through Six eyes to see the beauty

I walk down the fallen cultures Grinning with my open wounds Hanged on trees bodies I pull On putrid lips the kiss I leave

I thrusts myriads of birds away
On highways empty and dead
They fell first as it has been written
I look for beauty in them

Six cases I have with Devil Six times I withstood the test Six stakes I lit up

No more aves in the azure sky
No more fish in waving waters
No creatures left to furrow the ground
No predators in steepes
No more apes in tree-tops
And there's no proud crown of creation
Only me, dead man walking
Stamping the seventh seal
Is what left to do
