When a milion miles from no where Is still too close to home You're with a hundred thousand people And you still feel all alone

She was never in the circle
Or the round would be a square
And the more she seemed to want it
The less they seemed to care

Sold out and no admission Too late to buy It's never who it's only why She's living the lie

When you're on your way to somewhere But the elevator falls Do you look for stairs to heaven Or wander through the halls

He was only dedicated To the ones who make the law But they burned with too much fire And his heart was made of straw

No ticket - no admission Too late to buy It's always he and he knows why He's living the lie

Break down How bad do you want it How far will you go

If you're looking at tomorrow
To forget about today
Then the past will be your future
And it's there you'll always stay

What about the pictures
That smile from magazines
The ultimate temptation
Our new kings and all our queens

Such heat and too much pressure
Not worth the try
No more for them
Now it's I
And no more living the lie
Living the lie
Oh why
Live the lie
