

Ghost Town

Firefall

This house is empty, garden bare
There are no strangers welcome here
The sing outside the broken gates
Says, "Go away"

The memories linger in these walls
But no one answers, no one calls
And waiting here reveals the flaws
After all

I been lying to myself, crying out for help
But no one can hear me now
The fever still burns, baby you've turned my heart
Into a ghost town

I scattered the ashes of my pride
No place to run, nowhere to hide
There is no shelter and I feel
The chill

This place is full of fear, I don't like it here
I wish I could tear it down
I've been fighting to survive, feeling half alive
My heart is a ghost town

I've been lying to myself, crying out for help
But no one can hear me now
The fever still burns, baby you've turned my heart
Into a ghost town

I've been lying to myself, crying out for help
But no one can hear me now
The fever still burns, baby you've turned my heart
Into a ghost town
Oh, my heart is a ghost town
