Many's the day I took for granted
Breathing the air that sinlenced some
As the North Wind blew
With its head of thunder
Beating its breast with a war drenched song
Bathe awhile, awash in slumber
Cry what's left to sleep
Where you dream of the love you left forever
But pity no more nor grieve

For we're the kings of it all
For the day we were born
Now we're the kings of the Kilburn High
Sure we'll always take a drop and we'll never leave a sup
Your empty glass is but a tear filled eye
We were the kings of the Kilburn High

Listen to the sound of dead men dying March as they flee but exiled bound Their ship once sailed no longer anchors For gone is the green And their hallowed gound

Toast to tears of times past glories This ageless clock chime stalls Where to kiss the lips of that love forgotten To fly where no others have soared

For we're the kings of it all

For the day we were born

Now we're the kings of the Kilburn High

Sure we'll always take a drop and we'll never leave a sup

Your empty glass is but a tear filled eye

We were the kings of the Kilburn High

Toast to tears of times past glories This ageless clock chime stalls Where to kiss the lips of that love forgotten To fly where no others have soared

For we're the kings of it all

For the day we were born

Now we're the kings of the Kilburn High

Sure we'll always take a drop and we'll never leave a sup

Your empty glass is but a tear filled eye

We were the kings of the Kilburn High
