Break thy silence o gray, turbulent sea! Impart thy secrets, whisper tem to me My eyes are focused out of this world Where three hundred voices sing of glories old Drakkars in the mist Vikings are sailing to plunder in the East! Drakkars in the mist With sails full of wind, come, let us take to the sea! I journeyed back in time When offerings were rich on the shrines Of Freyja and Odin alike And runes were still young on the monoliths "Blood we spill in the name of Thor, and the roar of thunder is our delight We are the sons of battle, warriors of heathendom Our hearts are made of steel and our swords of iron!" Drakkars in the mist Vikings are sailing to plunder in the East! Drakkars in the mist With sails full of wind, come, let us take to the sea! But long years have gone by and all that remains is a darkened sky I begged the waves to breathe a mist So the drakkars may return anon one day!