Beyond the Blue Neon

George Strait

Swingin' doors Sawdust floors A heartache drowns as the whiskey pours There's a hole in the wall From some free for all The ringin' crack of that old cue ball

I've been fallin' in here For what seems like years Where the tears and the lonely belong And wonder what's going on Beyond that blue neon

I hear tell there's people out there who don't know What losin' you means They don't have a heart That just falls apart At the mention of your name

I heard they pretend The world didn't end Right when I knew you were gone I guess life still goes on Beyond that blue neon

I hear tell there's people out there who don't know What losin' you means They don't have a heart That just falls apart At the mention of your name

But it's a quarter 'til two And I don't have a clue As to what I'll do from now 'til dawn I wonder what's going on Beyond that blue neon

Lord, what's going on Beyond that blue neon
