

No Matter What

Jakob Dylan

In to the arms of the unknown
In to the places we never go
By walking through deep snow down forgotten roads
Been chasin' a light that comes and goes

No matter what
There is a new day on its way
And no matter what
There is more love to be made

A crowd of young people gather in the park
A black satin skyline filling with stars
It's still not that easy hearing your name
I will not pretend for anyone I am half the same

No matter what
There is a new day on its way
And no matter what
There is more love to be made

There are dreams I keep secret
Where I go barefoot through gauntlets
Going back for this old love
I will risk my neck time and time again

Be at ease, I'm not leaving I am fearful what comes
There is grace in the madness when all seasons come at once
You are safe in the arms of the unknown
I just need to remind you that the brave, they carry on

No matter what
There is a new day on its way
And no matter what
There is more love to be made
No matter what
There is a heartache on its way
And no matter what
There is more love to be made
