

To Tell the Truth

Jaymay

with you i have no choice only dreams to vent my thoughts and my arms they feel to show no shame to wrap them all around your love in vain with you i have no voice only eyes to speak my mind but my memory astonishes my memory's sublime

i run into the wind
and i find a silent space within i run into the wind to be alone i run into the wind so i can see whats in my heart

i run into the wind to tell the truth

with you i have no name only verse without refrain but my chorus lives inside the rain that seeks to stain the roof and windowpane with you i have no frame only shape that cant be claimed but my violence lives inside lightning that breaks a branch in half

i run into the wind
just to find a silent space within
i run into the wind to be alone

i run into the wind only i can see whats in my head
i run into the wind to tell the truth

with you i have no smile only habits like a child and the moments i look forward to are moments i have learned to hide from view with you i have no goals only days that dare unfold like a flower that keeps blossoming through no will of its own

i run into the wind
and i find a silent space within
i run into the wind to be alone

i run into the wind and i finally sing whats in my heart
i run into the wind to tell the truth
i run into the wind to tell the truth