The Well

Jennifer Warnes

We can make it, I know we can Only time will tell Let's take a walk down to the water Let's go the well You hear that low humming underground Hear the skylark in the dell The wild world is speaking Let's go to the well

Sometimes my heart feels like a dandelion Seeds scattered in a careless wind And nothing to show for my life and time but Innocent wonder in the face of thunder Feeling like something is about begin

Let's build a bonfire For the stories we tell Of wild years, the wasted tears Ant he silent way they fell See the curls of smoke rising up To the big old sky as the moonlight falls Down over those distant hiss I don't want to be anywhere else anymore Let's go to the well

You better believe my faith in you It is wide and steady as a Texas moon And when this stuff starts rolling through Its as all innocent wonder in the face of thunder Feeling like something is coming soon

We can make it, I know we can Only time will tell Let's take a walk down to the water Let's go the well

And let's go down to those hills through the Trees across the rocky path Down to the Blanco river Come with me darling, the sky is a so big today My heart's so full C'mon, lets go to the well now, babe
