

It Wouldn't Have Made Any Difference

Johnny Mathis

Do you remember the last time I said
If I ever thought of lying I'd rather think of dying instead?
And maybe you remember
The last time you called me to say we were through
How it took a million tears just to prove they all were for you

But those days are through
'Cause it wouldn't have made any difference
If you loved me, how could you love me?
When it couldn't really make any difference
If you really loved me, you just didn't love me

'Cause I know a hundreds of times I could be
In the most unfaithful arms that you always pictured me
And maybe you remember
That though I can't always show proof I was true
No one else could change my mind or stop me coming home to you

But those days are through
'Cause it wouldn't have made any difference
If you loved me, how could you love me?
When it couldn't really make any difference
If you really loved me, you just didn't love me

Enough to believe me, enough not to leave me
Enough not to look for a reason to be unhappy with me
And make me regret ever wanting you

But those days are through
'Cause it wouldn't have made any difference
If you loved me, how could you love me?
When it couldn't really make any difference
If you really loved me, you just didn't love me
