

The Whole Night Through

Josh Rouse

Tonight the moon shows an extra light
That shines for only us to see
And all it takes for you to smile
Is lift your eyes and breathe

Because when you start to doubt somehow it all works out
The line becomes the truth
And what we need right now is somewhere to just lay down
And dream the whole night through

Your cousin had called from somewhere across the ocean
Bad news, a death it seems
And I'll be a friend, a father to an orphan
A hand in the time of need

Because when you start to doubt somehow it all works out
The line becomes the truth
And what we need right now is somewhere to just lay down
And dream the whole night through
