Message from the Black Star

Laibach

I am the storm bringer and the bearer of light I set up the Nobel prise and invented dynomite I raised you up after the fall Without me you would be nothing, nothing at all

I am the builder of Babel, a stairway to Heaven He replaced the tower with a million nations And then He told you to love, love one another Then again He said, fire! brother against brother

He is the dreamer who demands too much I am the realist, I expect nothing as such Beware false idols, belive in me Beware false idols, belive in me

He says I make work for idols hands That sloth, envy and rage erode time's sand Plus gluttony, greed, impurity and pride That makes seven ways to keep Him occupied

He fulfilled every step in my masterplan When His son upon this earth did crashland He was my twin, my faithful negative It was me who really showed Him to live

He is the dreamer who demands too much I am the realist, I expect nothing as such Beware false idols, belive in me Beware false idols, belive in me

Welcome to Hell, you already know my name For that you have your Lord Jesus Christ to blame He did my work well, He was my greatest creation Through Him I spoke to you and to many a nation

It's hard for you with your dying breath
To speak my name ang go into death
Knowing that I and only I am the one

The only one...
