Commercial Affection

Mel Tillis

I was lonely I guess, the night that we met In a tavern down on old Broadway And there were tears in her eyes And she whispered a sigh Stranger, please take me out of here

But it was only commercial affection 'Cause a fool and his money will part Yes it was only commercial affection But she walked away with my heart

I stood in disbelief as she hurried off To meet another fool down on Broadway Now many nights have come and gone Still the echo lingers on Stranger, please take me out of here
