Common people living quietly in confusion
Information's giving quite a grand illusion
Hearts are beating, keeping time to meet a deadline
Faces pressed against the pane to watch a headline

When the winds blow I will call When the winds blow I will call When the winds blow I will call you We will stand and watch them fall

All our ships are sailing blindly under one sun Sending signals, calling kindly, reaching no-one Echoes sound the shifting air of empires calling Hold my hand, the shifting sand of empires falling

When the winds blow I will call When the winds blow I will call When the winds blow I will call you We will stand and watch them fall Oh, we'll stand and watch them fall

We confided, then decided not to follow All the slogans, taunts and charges, sound so hollow With open minds across the border, we have waited But keeping place within this race is complicated

When the winds blow I will call When the winds blow I will call When the winds blow I will call you We will stand and watch them

When the winds blow I will call When the winds blow I will call When the winds blow I will call you We will stand and watch them fall Oh, we'll stand and watch them fall