

Shapes Of Metal

Otherwise

I'm a passenger on a poisoned ride, deadly messenger, highway suicide.
In the neon glow I pull the wheel aside, through the back window I watch the world spin by
And if my body goes, will my mind remain here for you?
And though I tempted fate you know my life was saved for something beautiful
And now there's no explaining my recklessness, endangering the lives of all my friends,
I'm slowly burning s one by one, but blessed to see the rising sun, I spin into oblivion
And if my body goes, will my heart remain here for you?
And though I tempted fate you know my life was saved for someone just like you,
For something beautiful
Now I'm spinning away, across all of these unforgiving lanes to an unknown destination,
Now I'm spinning away, across all of these unforgiving lanes in to oblivion
And if my body goes, you know my soul will stay here for you
And though I tempted fate you know my life was saved for something beautiful,
For someone just like you, for something beautiful,
For you
