

The Moon Inside

Robyn Hitchcock

I was walking home when I heard you knock
There were two of you, it was such a shock
There was one that cried on the telephone
And the other laughed deep inside my bone
I can tell you this, when the full moon seed
It be plant in you, then it's what you need
Cause the flower of love growing in your heart
Will eventually tear your world apart

The moon inside gets round and round
The moon inside gets round
I can tell you this, when the female hand
She contours you, and you're like the sand
And you'd never guess you were in so deep
Till you u try to walk, but you just can't creep
Well she takes her time, but she arrives
With her candle stub and her carving knives
Like a pumpkin head you'll be lit within
And she severs you with a six inch grin
