New Lips

Roy Drusky

These are new lips, they're not your lips But they kiss me the way yours used to do They're not your arms, they're just two arms And they'll hold me until I'm over you

Makes no difference who I find to love me Just as long as they take you off my mind Anymore, I just don't care who holds me I run to the nearest one I find

These are new lips, they're not your lips But they kiss me the way yours used to do They're not your arms, they're just two arms And they'll hold me until I'm over you And they'll hold me until I'm over you
