

You'll Love Me Again

Rupert Holmes

She said, "I'm leaving."
I said, "You're leaving."
She said, "Somehow I thought you knew."
She said, "I'll phone ya."
I said, "No, I'll see you—
And don't believe this means we're through."

"You loved me once, you'll love me again.
I truly believe that.
You'll stay away awhile,
But even then
You'll wake one night
And you'll need me again.
You're not really leaving.
Believing this will get me through to then.
You loved me once
And you'll love me again."

She said, "You think so?"
I said, "I know so.
I know so much about you now."
She said, "Well maybe."
I said, "There's no maybe—
It makes no difference anyhow."

"You loved me once, you'll love me again.
I truly believe that.
You'll stay away awhile,
But even then
One stormy night
You'll call me again
And I will be waiting.
The only question now is how and when.
You loved me once,
You loved me more than once,
You loved me once and you'll love me again."
