

Maybe I will never know you
But I still feel like I know you
I could have sworn that you were right there
In the room with me tonight
I don't know what I'm so afraid of
Maybe it's loneliness
Or maybe it's the pain of
Growing up so fast
I know the moments never last

Late at night when I can't sleep
Because I drank too much caffeine
I stay up so I won't have to wake up
With no one next to me
But I find beauty in the darkness
'Cause what else am I to do?
When I hear you speaking softly
I know that you can see the beauty too

(You can see the beauty too)

Maybe I will never know why
Everything feels like it's crashing down at midnight
The moonlight is so bright
But I just don't feel right
Until I listen to you telling me it's alright

I was unaware of you
You were unaware of me of too
Maybe in another life
You weren't so far away

Early in the morning
When I wake up I need caffeine
I drift off into a world where I
Can just tell you my dreams
Because I think you'd understand them
And the universe in me
But even if I never know you
You're my candle
When it's too dark to see
