

The Weight

Seaway

It's plain to see
The divide between you and me
The vision we used to be
Now broken and shaken and I can't seem to comprehend the truth
Cause I'm losing it every second I spend with you
When down by the water there used to be room for two

Say it again, say it again
Drown yourself out, in thoughts of self-doubt

Spare, spare me the effort of feeling new
When all these projections are falling through
Faded, dismembered can you remember
That place where we could both escape
Cut each other down until we found our true shape
Those younger days
Before all of this weight

Say it again, say it again
Drown yourself out, in thoughts of self-doubt
And let me know where that gets you
'Cause I've been there before
Beat down and bitter
I made it through winter
Now I can see straight but I can't believe in anything, anything

I always wanted, always wanted to go
But no one, no one would ever take me there

I always wanted, always wanted to go
But no one, no one would ever take me there

Say it again, say it again
Drown yourself out, in thoughts of self-doubt
And let me know where that gets you
'Cause I've been there before
Beat down and bitter
I made it through winter
Now I can see straight but I can't believe in anything, anything

I always wanted, always wanted to go
But no one, no one would ever take me there

I always wanted (say it again, say it again)
Always wanted to go (drown yourself out)
But no one, no one would ever take me there (in self-doubt)
