

Buried and Broken

Steel Prophet

In a dream you lay me to rest
The shovels of dirt mixed with salty tears
I can't bear to cover your face, and be in that lonely place
We running in a one-way race
And leave you behind me again

Whispers ignite memories through my ears
How long have I stood here
Feeling the weight crush my soul
I know truth can't release emotion's control

I woke again today meeting in a veil last night
The meaning's lost wandering grasp so slight... so slight
I don't know what, but why I do... I do
We never spoke in the dream, yes babe I know it was you

The winds don't change inside
The smiles pretend, but cannot hide
The storm, the flood, the fire
Helpless, wounded unstoppable desire

Broken and alive buried and alive
Broken and alive, but I cannot hide
The winds don't change, and I burn inside
Burning and alive, the fire, unstoppable desire

Broken and alive
Broken and alive