The Inner Voice Silenced

Steel Prophet

Dawning is now a predicted age We're overpopulated rats in a cage Slowly our freedom begins to erode Governmental hypocrisy is bestowed

It is often said art imitates life It seems now we're denied that right Only confined to what they want us to see They mold our minds to how they want us to be Limited creations a fragment of the whole Stifled expressions the truth untold

Freedom of religion, freedom of speech So it is written, so practice what you preach Contradicting our beginning they disregard the law Exploiting all the violence as people watch in awe

Preference of eroticism For individual taste If you don't like what you see Then get the hell out of their space

Declaring art obscenity they exclude you from their race Slander you in the media they label you disgraced Indifferences in all of us and intercrossing paths Segregated by bigotry evolutions final wrath Do you believe we're really free If we can't reflect the world we see Reality only black and white Does freedom lie between wrong and right Who decides what laws will change Will liberty and justice still remain If this is what the future shows We'll all be slaves of mind control

Has America begun to weaken Or revolution began to awaken How can you blame us for being defiant When our inner voice is silenced

I don't know what this transposes in reverse And if an evil word appears it's not intentional Record our political leaders And study their subliminal hates Censor my words, censor their schemes They drove me to suicide (society shall sue them)

The media brainwashed me to love pursuit of things And not to trust my inner voice so absurd they still defiled Themselves and us by calling it the land of the Free and the home of the brave
