

Lovers & Liars

The Common Linnets

I see the light of a silver moon
shining on lovers and liars angry mornings, wasted nights one more day that we see slipping by walls and bridges we don't cross one more battle in the war we've lost bitter is the taste of the truth that we can't face

I see the light of a silver moon
Shining on lovers and liars
Here's to the fighters and here's to the fools
Lost in the fire of love

In the shadow of what we were Is there still a spark, cause it still burns faded flowers in the sand sad reminder of the love we had and bitter is the taste of the truth that we can't face

I see the light of a silver moon
Shining on lovers and liars
Here's to the fighters and here's to the fools
Lost in the fire of love

Will we see the break of dawn and will we still be holding on Will there be a different light upon us Can we give more than we take
