Three Wishes

The Pierces

We'd be so less fragile If we're made from metal And our hearts from iron And our minds from steel if we built an armour For our tender bodies Could we love each other Would we strive to feel

And you want three wishes: One to fly the heavens One to swim like fishes And then one you're saving for a rainy day If your lover ever takes her love away

You say you want to know her like a lover And undo her damage, she'll be new again Soon you'll find that if you try to save her It will renews her anger You will never win

And you want three wishes: You want never bitter And all delicious And then one you're saving for a rainy day If your lover ever takes her love away

You want three wishes: One to fly the heavens One to swim like fishes You want never bitter And all delicious And a clean conscience And all it's blisses You want one true lover with a thousand kisses You want one true lover with a thousand kisses You want soft and gentle and never vicious And then one you're saving for a rainy day If your lover ever takes her love away
