

Last Summer

The Troggs

It was a day like today when I met you
The sun was shining down on the sea
I held your hand and whispered softly
You are all the world to me
But that was last summer and I wish it was last summer now

We strolled along the beach in the moonlight
Throwing pebbles into the waves
Little things like this I remember
How I love those lazy days
But that was last summer and I wish it was last summer now

We spent such happy hours together
We went every way
Those strolls along the beach in the moonlight
We didn't have a worry or care
But when all the days were over
And I had to see you off on the train
You promised to write me a letter
But that letter never came
But that was last summer and I wish it was last summer now

We spent such happy hours together
We went every way
Those strolls along the beach in the moonlight
We didn't have a worry or care
But when all the days were over
And I had to see you off on the train
You promised to write me a letter
But that letter never came
But that was last summer and I wish it was last summer now
But that was last summer and I wish it was last summer now
