A Curse

Those Poor Bastards

Time to put on your hypocrite shoe You liar, you liar I've been disemboweled by the blues You liar, you liar You're not the thing you said you were You're just another curse, a curse, a curse

I seen you there out in the pines You liar, you liar That grave you dig will not be mine You liar, you liar You're not the thing you said you were You're just another curse, a curse, a curse

I curse the sight I curse the sight I curse the sight of you And yet I need you to survive Though what I live is hardly life

You etched your face into that tree You liar, you liar I feel it out there watching me You liar, you liar You're not the thing you said you were You're just another curse, a curse, a curse

Speak to me and clear your name You liar, you liar Or I'll set your tongue aglow with flame You liar, you liar You're not the thing you said you were You're just another curse, a curse, a curse

I curse the sight I curse the sight I curse the sight of you And yet I need you to survive Though what I live is hardly life
