

Plant Sugar

Turnover

Tonight I stood outside in the rain
Counted the drops
That ran down my face
They danced with the light so I could see
Laid on my eyes
And dove to my feet

Yesterday I was worried so sick
Now it feels like I'm lucky instead
Underneath the sequoia and pine
Let them plant sugar into my head

Looked for minute trying to find
Ursa Major
Drawn in the sky
Felt my wet skin get kissed by the breeze
Gently it passed
Along through the leaves

Yesterday I was worried so sick
Now it feels like I'm lucky instead
Underneath the sequoia and pine
Let them plant sugar into my head

If you ask how I'm feeling tonight
Baby nothing could make me feel bad
With the moon almost full in the sky
For too long I been moving too fast
