New Times

Violent Femmes

New Times, New Times, New Times Good morning, good morning I'm the guard at one time this was rather pleasant The poets they still had to muse over the classicism of clean s hoes But who today still knows a button stick

Well, that's the New Times, that's the New Times That's the New Times

The girls would lie down, the girls would lie down The girls would lie down before us First one went dancing, first one went dancing First one went dancing and then behind the bushes

Today you have to run through twenty places Get drunk on saccharin and methyl And then you still don't get them that far

Well, that's the New Times, that's the New Times That's the New Times

Now take it easy there in the early morning Who arrives but the brethren from the press Now take it easy there in the early morning Who arrives but the brethren from the press

If somewhere there lies a cadaver Or something is foul in the state You can be sure that a writer is not far behind With his Excellency I only say Hands off, hands off hands off the literature

The Laurel Wreath one gets today Second hand so to speak from the old Empire's stories Sold underhand at the Alexander Platz with all the wigs and cos tumes Twitching from the shoulder one is informed

Well, that's the New Times, that's the New Times That's the New Times That's the New Times, that's the New Times That's the New Times New Times, New Times, New Times
