Today

Yael Naim

Today I'm looking at the world and I see ugliness and beauty neighbours An angel lives inside a liar and he doesn't even know that he has all this inside him

And it's been seven years
since I've been looking for,
and I was crying for more...
It's been seven years
since I've been looking for,
and I was crying for more...

Today I'm taking back my words cause I've been judging everybody so easily Instead, I show you who I am a liar, an angel, a generous-egoist, genius-coward

And it's been seven years
since I've been looking for,
and I was crying for more...
It's been seven years
since I've been looking for,
and I was crying for more...

Today I'm looking at our world and I think choices are everywhere every second We choose to love, choose to hate Choose to lose or win to take a risk or to give up

Cause it's been seven years
since I've been looking for,
and I was crying for more...
It's been seven years since I've been looking for and I was dying for more...

Today I'm celebrating our insanity cause we are loving unreasonably We lost our hold
No promises...
No signs...
Where to go?
Just a pure moment of joy.

Cause it's been seven years
since I've been looking for,
and I was crying for more...
It's been seven years since
I've been looking for,
and I was crying for more...