

Ending a Chapter

A Common Year

I'm starting a new year,
With the same resolutions.
And I found a new love,
With all the same problems.
So I walked through your front door,
Just like the night before.
To talk about my dreams,
And if they have meaning.

I wish I could say,
What I need to say.
But I'm still hangin' on for one last chance to play
I wish that I knew,
What I need to know.
Then it would be easier for me just to let it go.

I'm starting a new day,
With the same reservations.
You're ending a chapter,
For all the wrong reasons.
So I talked to an old friend,
To try to find answers,
To all of the questions,
That I couldn't ask her.
Like "why is it so hard?"
And "why do we care so much?"
And "why do we hold on to what we don't have a hold on?"

I wish I could say,
What I need to say.
But I'm still hangin' on for one last chance to play
I wish that I knew,
What I need to know.
Then it would be easier for me just to let it go.

I wish I could say,
What I need to say.
But I'm still hangin' on for one last chance to play
I wish that I knew,
What I need to know.
Then it would be easier for me just to let it go.
Just to let it go.

I'm starting a new year.