

Eclipsed

A Loss for Words

Your dead eyes spoke in a decimated language
Of summers past, our momentary lapse,
Your warm breath choked like a sea salt breeze
Left me somewhere in between the spaces in your teeth,
It's time to forget it. It's time to move on.
Stay, won't you stay for the summer because the winter might tear us apart?
I swore I'd never let this happen again.
No never not ever again
Your unyielding wrists were spinning just like turbines
They had something else in mind.
Our improbable tryst was eclipsed by September.
I was always two steps behind.
Stay, won't you stay for the summer because the winter might tear us apart?
I swore I'd never let this happen again.
No never not ever again.
It's time to forget it. It's time to move on.
Stay, won't you stay for the summer because the winter might tear us apart?
I swore I'd never let this happen again.
Just stay for the summer.
No never not ever again.
It's time it's time to forget
Just forget it
It's time it's time to move on