O Creator

Aisha Badru

If sound birthed the earth then what would you breathe?
If rhythm moved the planets how would you beat?
If the word spelled the universe, how would you speak?
If the song made us all how would you sing?
If the notes carved the canyons what would you play?
If the verses filled the oceans what would you say?
If a poem raised the mountains what would you articulate?
If harmony made our hearts what would you serenade?

O now creator, call into the world
What you express shall be yours
There is magic on your tongue
There is spark of life in your lungs
O now creator, in front of my eyes
Call into the world what you like
Use your voice and don't be afraid
'Cause all that you say is sacred

The world that we see, so much more than we think
And the thoughts in our minds are like pens filled with ink
Every action we take, a mark we create
If we don't act at all it is one in the same
The wind is our breath, the trees are our lungs
Wisdom lost in the web of the stories we've spun
When you go deep within, you are taking a stand
By healing ourselves, we are healing this land
Peace on earth can be ours
A planet of love can be ours
If we first understand everything that we see
Is a co-creation authored by you and me

With every ounce of forgiveness, we bring onto Earth a holy river
The water of the life-giver, the life-giver
With every drop of love that I share, we bring onto Earth a sacred ri ver
The water of the life-giver, the life-giver

I harmonize now
If the world was made by love
Then every time we love
We become the maker of it all
Maker of it all (maker of it all)
Maker of it all (maker of it all)
Maker of it all (maker of it all)

O now creator, in front of my eyes
Call into the world what you like
Use your voice and don't be afraid
'Cause all that you say is sacred
