Pathetic, Ordinary

Alesana

She haunts me in dreams I see her silhouette dance Across landscapes of golden Light and autumn in my dreams

Her soft eyes see through my tortured soul Vanishing any hope for fantasy
The thing I'd give to prove myself to her
To make her see

Jaded eyes awake
As her selfish words rain
From such placid lips
Still I kiss her silken flesh

Frigid air leaves me breathless Foolish agony fills my lungs As I try to scream for her

I confess, I scare myself Through the howling wind On my knees, I cry listen to me

I'm broken by her silence to a love unseen Blood soaked feathers rained down My wingless angel, so broken Falls gracefully from the sky To waiting arms, to waiting arms

Frigid air leaves me breathless Foolish agony fills my lungs As I try to scream for her

I confess, I scare myself Through the howling wind On my knees, I cry, listen to me

Such foolish agony fills my lungs As I try to scream for her Jaded eyes wake to the sounds Of my voice as I scream to her

In dreams I've seen her Silhouette dance across golden light And autumn in my dreams