

Humbled to be Home

Alexz Johnson

The kettle burnt again, I didn't hear that it was blowing
I was just outside hanging clothes on the line
The floor it creaks beside the room my baby's off and dreaming
It tends to wake him up every time
Coffee in the morning, Dad is off to wear his hands
They hold us up in times we're not meant to understand
Summer days are long and warm, our toes beneath the sand
You tend to stay there longer than I can

Where we end up belongs to the unknown
I'm just humbled to be home

How can I be so lucky?
How can I be so blessed?
I found my way from darkness
I no longer am alone
And I'm humbled to be home

Living's meant for trying, trying hard to feel alive
Life ain't meant for dying, finding ways to just arrive
With all the pain we've overcome, there's not a prize that could be won
Greater than the gift of love and giving love a try

Where we end up belongs to the unknown
I'm just humbled to be home

How did I find this magic?
How did I pass the test?
How could I move these mountains without you by my side?
I'm humbled and alive

This love's got me some mighty weight
Humbled to be home
Humbled to be home
This love's got me some mighty weight
Humbled to be home
Humbled to be home

How did I end up here?
Tell me what did I do?
Where did I do something right?
Why did you see me through?
All of my broken dreams were never meant to come true
I don't need shiny things, just need to be next to you

Where we end up belongs to the unknown
I'm just humbled to be home

This love's got me some mighty weight
Humbled to be home
Humbled to be home
This love's got me some mighty weight
Humbled to be home
Humbled to be home
This love's got me some mighty weight
Humbled to be home
Humbled to be home

This love's got me some mighty weight
Humbled to be home
Humbled to be home
