

Where Does It Hurt

Alexz Johnson

Where does it hurt?
Tell me 'cause I understand the words of a heart are beating like winds in my hand.
We can hide.
We'll never lie.
I'll always see into you.

There's nothing wrong with coming up empty and cold.
Staying too long and try to change rocks into gold.

I've been there too.
I've wasted myself.
And you were there for me.
So whenever you crash, wherever you lay, that's where I'll be.

And for ever endless midnight, there's a sky full of broken stars.
And there'll always be a place for you, inside my arms.

Where does it hurt.
When you open your heart there's always so much to lose.
So far to fall and no where to go when it's true.

But if you let me in, I won't let you down. Put your faith in me.

'Cause whenever you crash, wherever you lay, that's where I'll be.
And for ever endless midnight, there's a sky full of broken stars.
And there'll always be a place for you, inside my arms.
And there's a million streets to walk down, in this city of broken hearts.
But there'll always be a place for you, inside my arms.
Where does it hurt. (2x)

And for ever endless midnight, there's a sky full of broken stars.
And there'll always be a place for you, inside my arms.
And there's a million streets to walk down, in this city of broken hearts.
But there'll always be a place for you, inside my arms.
Where does it hurt. (3x)