

In Your Midnight Orchard

Alghazanth

[When we close our eyes and withdraw from the world around us, we awaken to perceive another beyond it. If we explore this limitless realm with willed steps, we are granted the opportunity to come in contact with the denizens of the Otherworld, to experience initiation and to even converse with the Divine.]

Across the arcane bridge of soul-flight I have arrived in your domain where the great fair three as one shine yet the fourth still veiled remains

As through these glades I wander strangest roses tear my skin they deepen the spell I'm under with your venom of hallowed sin

Though I remember not, again I now know the language of owls that are guiding me back home

Free my starving soul and chain my heart to this ardent hour of ecstasy with the sword of your splendor pierce my eyes make your radiance the last thing I'll see

The Gate of Eden is swung open I am a witness to your reign my life I offer you as a token for one drop from wisdom's vein

To you I pray, make me versed in your ways pale pilgrim with the bloodied crescent horns grant me strenght and on my head now place the wreath of silver thorns

It is not your wrath that may crush me it is your love that must...

Pain and relief, sorrows and joys they all shriek at me in your worldless voice

Rend apart my heart and anil my soul to Night's searing cross of severity with the speark of your judgement pierce my side make painful bliss the last thing I'll feel